Massacre at Presley Park Elly Grant

29th September on a hot, sunny day. Presley Park, in the centre of a leafy suburb, is the setting for a family charity picnic event. Most of the district has turned out and everyone is having fun until the unthinkable happens. Amongst the families, many of whom are in fancy dress, strides a lone man, he is clothed in combat gear and he's carrying an AK-47. He walks into the middle of the picnic ground seemingly unnoticed, but he is not taking part in the event. Without any warning, he opens fire indiscriminately into the startled crowd. People collapse wounded and dying. Those who can run, flee for their lives. The story takes us back to two weeks before the awful event, into the lives of the people involved.
