Modern Thinkers, Principally Upon Social Science: What They Think, and Why (Classic Reprint) Van Buren Denslow

Excerpt from Modern Thinkers, Principally Upon Social Science: What They Think, and Why

This book is both a product and a proof of the extent to which in America, the daily Press, owing to its greater wealth, circulation, and enterprise, is performing for the people, as rapidly as the demand arises, the function which in Europe is performed by the Reviews, viz., that of supplying discussions of the more abstract elements of Politics and Sociology, and rendering the reading public familiar to some extent with the philosophic systems of leading thinkers. The articles embraced in this volume were written for The Chicago Times, at the request of Mr. Storey, its editor, and published in its Saturday edition, which has a circulation of some sixty thousand copies, before being collected in book form. Most of them attracted very general attention, and letters of criticism, commendation and response came in to them from the most distant and unexpected quarters of the globe, as well as from points near at hand. One request for their publication in book form comes from a German, residing in Egypt, another from a Frenchman, in Quebec. The fact that the most experienced, enterprising and successful daily journalist now living, should open his columns to expositions of current philosophic and sociological systems, requiring so much space, and that they should be widely read and preserved by those who have read them in this form, indicates that there is an increasing demand on the part of the public for thought that is independent of any and all forms of theological bias.
