Tom Russo works for the CIA, and his latest assignment will surely impact him for the rest of his life-if he survives. Someday, computers will know everything and will be able to do anything. Are we at that point right now? In the novel Do You Believe?, Tom Russo has been chosen to uncover all of the eerie secrets of Max-a special computer with incredible power. Max reveals events from the past, predicts the future, and seemingly reads someone's mind. Tom finds himself on the brink of a nervous breakdown when Max correctly predicts a horrific car accident, and he finds out that his own daughter has a terrible, incurable illness. Will Tom rely on science, or will he place his faith and trust in God during the most challenging and troubling time in his life? With all that is occurring in the world of computer technology, cyber espionage, and big data mining, Do You Believe? explores some of the complex issues that arise as a result of twenty-first-century technology. In the end, this story shows that faith in God is the only thing that we can absolutely count on...for everything.
